JOHN HALIPAN, GENTLEMAN, A Thought Measuring Machine. Dr. J. K. McKatterell has constructed in ingenious apparatus by which he can determine, with a considerable degree of accuracy, the time it takes to think and has experimented with many interesting results. He has shown that to see a piece of white paper and be conscions of the fact takes one-twentieth of a second; to see a picture takes one-tenth of a second; to see a letter of common print, one-eighth of a second; to see We would like to say something able to judge between red and blue, oneinirteenth of a second.

He has also proved that to see some words and letters requires more time than others. By this same machine, with some added pieces of mechanism, The Press one year and the Books for $1.50 the time of remembering can also be a learned M.
